In a first-ever victory for Marshall-Wythe, the National Moot Court team of Elizabeth Deininger, Joe Gerbasi, and Michael McAuliffe captured the First Place, Best Brief, and Best Oralist awards at the 39th Annual National Moot Court Competition held last week in New York City.

The team, which won the Regional 4 competition in Richmond last November, advanced through six rounds and competed with 28 other teams to win the top-place award Thursday night before a panel of nine judges.

One hundred fifty law schools participated in the Competition, the oldest and considered to be the most prestigious of moot court competitions, which is sponsored annually by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and by the American College of Trial Lawyers. This year’s case problem concerned whether the exercise of peremptory challenges to exclude women from jury selection solely on the basis of gender violates the fourteenth and sixth amendments.

Gerbasi, who won Best Oralist at the Regional Competition last November, garnered that prize again at the national competition, bringing home two pieces of the team’s silver collection. He characterized the judges for the competition as “tough,” and recounted that “they interrupted each other to ask us questions.” Gerbasi added that, at one point during his final round argument, “I had a backlog of three questions.”

McAuliffe, as the “swing” member of the team, was charged with arguing the petitioner side of the case with Gerbasi and, in turn, arguing the respondent side with Deininger. Although the assignments for each round of the competition were decided by a coin toss, the team argued the petitioner side of the case three times, and argued the respondent side three times, demonstrating the strength of all three of the team’s oral advocates.

In the final round argument, the team argued against the University of Kentucky team whom they had defeated in the Final Round of the Regional Competition. The nine-member panel of judges for the final argument includes James L. Oakes.
Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, Levin H. Campbell, Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and Leonard I. Garth of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Difference

“We became the team to beat,” commented McAuliffe on the sense of competition at the Nationals. “A lot of people were exposed to William and Mary but didn’t know what to expect.” When asked what he believed made the difference between Marshall-Wythe and the other teams, McAuliffe said, “Attitude.” Gerbasi added, “When you get to that level of competition, motivation makes all the difference. It’s all in how much you can psyche yourself up.”

Strategy also distinguished the team. “We framed our approach to the tournament in a very special way,” said McAuliffe. All three team members agreed that their brief score, which was calculated with the oral score in the first two rounds, was also a major factor in their success. Deininger added that the team was “well prepared by the practice arguments” they had undergone during the weeks prior to leaving for New York, but thought that the decisive factor was the team’s water intake. “We drank more water than any other team,” she explained. “They had great water at the competition,” added Gerbasi.

School Support

“This is just an external confirmation of what we’ve already known about this law school,” declared Dean Timothy Sullivan, commenting on the team’s victory in the “most demanding competition in the country.” He added, “For the three who have demonstrated that they are the best, they deserve all the congratulations we can give them.”

Deininger, McAuliffe, and Gerbasi each commented that they appreciate the support they received from the law school community during the competition. “We were very surprised and pleased that everyone made this a school-wide event,” McAuliffe said. Deininger explained: “We got up there, and the other teams had entourages and coaches with them...but it was nice to know that people back here were rooting you on.” The team also reinforced the hope that alumni who participated in moot court activities would provide annual fund support restricted to the moot court program. With additional annual fund/moot court contributions, teams can go further, without having to depend on their own personal finances.

Among the team’s rewards was the Russell J. Coffin Award, given to the winning team, which consists of a permanent prize of a silver tray as well as a cash award “to be used to further the skills of oral advocacy.” When asked what the Law School would do with such an award, Dean Sullivan replied, “We certainly would see that it goes to benefit the Moot Court program.”

The Legacy: Advice to Future Teams

When asked what advice this trio would give to future moot court teams looking to repeat their success, Gerbasi responded, “The importance of having a good brief cannot be stressed enough.” Deininger observed: “It’s hard to plan that you all get along as a team, but we did. I think we were a good team together and it showed.”

ANNUAL FUND SUPPORT SURGES AHEAD OF LAST YEAR’S CONTRIBUTIONS

Associate Dean Deborah Vick attributes the success of this year’s Annual Fund to the Class Agent program and a hard working Annual Fund Board of Directors. She notes that the classes of 1973 and 1978 are in the lead, with the classes of 1980, 1982, 1983 and 1984 closely following. Annual Fund figures are currently at $180,000. The goal is to reach $210,000 by June 30th.

CALLING ALL ALUMNI.
WE NEED YOUR SUPPORT!
Beginning next year, Marshall-Wythe will be the home of the Administrative Law Review, a publication of the American Bar Association Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice. Dudley W. Woodbridge Professor of Law, Charles Koch will be editor-in-chief and Marshall-Wythe students will serve as assistant editors and staff.

Koch will choose four students who are currently second-years to work as senior editors. He may also appoint some second-year students as staff members. The highest student position will be that of Managing Editor filled by Jeff Kaufman, editor for the 1989-90 academic year.

Koch sees the coming of the Review to Marshall-Wythe as "... an important step for the Law School." He explained, "We have in the Section [of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice] good legal scholars ..." and can expect good articles. "Some of the top people in the profession are readers of the Review." Koch also envisions publishing student articles occasionally.

Dean Sullivan views the moving of the Review to Marshall-Wythe as "a coup. It's an important recognition of the quality of our school. Plus, it will give a number of our students the opportunity to get journal experience."

Prof. Koch expects that time commitments for senior editors and regular staffers will be roughly the same as that for members of the William and Mary Law Review, and slightly less for third-year staffers. The faculty will decide in late March whether to grant academic credit to members.

The Administrative Law Review has been under the direction of John Reese at the Law School of the University of Denver for about 13 years. When Reese decided that he had been directing it long enough, the ABA went looking for the right law school to take over. According to College President Paul Verkuil, an administrative law scholar of significant note and the Chair-Elect of the ABA Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice, among the schools considered were Columbia, Cornell and American University. Verkuil said that the Section wanted "... an active, published, distinguished academic as editor-in-chief and a school without too many established journals." He summarized the agreement between the ABA and the school as "... a five-year commitment." After the 1993-94 school year, either the ABA or Marshall-Wythe is free to withdraw. A willingness on the part of the Law School administration to make space for the Review and provide it with computers and some secretarial services was an additional factor in favor of Marshall-Wythe. For its part, the ABA will pay almost all out-of-pocket costs of distribution — no small contribution, considering that the distribution is almost equal to that of the Harvard Law Review.

Will Murphy is currently a 2nd year law student and reporter for Marshall-Wythe's Advocate.
The Marshall-Wythe School of Law welcomed a new face to its administrative staff in February. Suzanne Tucker has joined the staff as the new Assistant Director of Alumni Affairs, currently a part-time position. Her duties include organizing special events such as homecoming and the annual spring reunion, and producing the various alumni publications, including the William & Mary Lawyer and three newsletters.

Suzanne’s experience makes her especially well qualified to work with alumni affairs. She has travelled extensively throughout the United States and dealt with a wide variety of students before coming to Williamsburg.

The Milwaukee, Wisconsin, native began her career as a teacher after graduating from the University of Wisconsin at Steven’s Point with a B.S. in Education of the Deaf. After teaching for four years, Suzanne pursued graduate studies at the University of Maryland at College Park, where she earned a master’s degree in Counseling and College Student Personnel. During this time, she also worked as an undergraduate admissions counselor, and had the opportunity to do publications work, as well.

From Maryland, Suzanne moved to Stockton, California, to work as an admissions counselor for the University of the Pacific. In this capacity, she primarily concentrated on informing students about the university. As part of the job, she travelled throughout the West, including Alaska. She was subsequently promoted to Assistant Director of Admissions, a post she held until she and her husband moved to St. Mary’s, Georgia. In Georgia, Suzanne worked as the Manager of volunteers at the Red Cross office. She feels that this opportunity to work with volunteers of all ages will be an asset to her current job at William and Mary.

Suzanne and her husband were attracted to the Williamsburg area because of the excellent quality of life, active community and strong cultural tradition. When not on the job, she enjoys reading, especially non-fiction and sociological works.

Travelling is a special pleasure, especially to places like New Orleans, Charleston, and Key West. When not travelling or enjoying the cultural activities in Williamsburg, she can be found at home with her three cats, all of whom adopted her. With these interests, Suzanne should fit right in at Marshall-Wythe.

Kay Kindred: Deputy Director, Institute of Bill of Rights Law

by Toya Cook

"It's exciting! The Institute's taking a new direction in its response to constitutional issues." Kay Kindred's enthusiasm resounds as she describes the Institute of Bill of Rights Law and her position as Deputy Director.

Kay received her undergraduate degree cum laude, in Political Science and Sociology from Duke University before pursuing her J.D. at Columbia where she was the Submissions Editor of the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. Prior to her position at Marshall-Wythe, Kay was staff attorney for General Electric and Assistant to the General Counsel for Old Dominion University. Commenting on her attraction to Marshall-Wythe, she says, "It was the national reputation of the faculty and the high caliber of students combined with the new direction that the Institute will be taking" that influenced her decision.

As Deputy Director, Ms. Kindred will be able to combine educational administration, teaching and scholarly research. Her responsibilities take the Institute into new dimensions as she will be initiating fundraising efforts with foundation sponsorship and administering student programs of the Institute which will include a student symposium and student publications. She she will also teach in the legal skills program next fall.

Kay is very enthusiastic about the amount of contact that she will have with the student body. "I am very interested in students and the student component of the Institute will be a very good vehicle for them to learn and write about issues concerning civil rights and liberties." Through her efforts with Rod Smolla, Director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law, she looks forward to furthering dialogue between faculty, students, the media and the public in the Institute's role as a center for creative legal thought.

MARSHALL-WYTHE ESTABLISHES CARTER O. LOWANCE FELLOWSHIP IN PUBLIC SERVICE

Friends of Carter O. Lowance who participated in the program for the public announcement, held in the Blue Room of the Wren Building on February 21, 1989. Pictured left to right - top row: Robert Friend Boyd, W. Roy Smith, President Paul R. Verkuil, Dean Timothy J. Sullivan. Left to right - bottom row: Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., Carter O. Lowance, and Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Vernon M. Geddy, Jr. and Governor Albertus Harrison, Jr. were unable to attend. Approximately $120,000 was raised which will allow a distinguished public servant to visit the school annually and meet with students, faculty and alumni.
A dramatic increase has occurred in the number of applicants to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law for 1989. The number of applicants is in excess of 3000 and represents an historic high. Last year's increase of 16.6% when compared with 1987 will pale by comparison to this year's increase of almost 30%. Although each year's statistics and the qualifications of applicants are noteworthy in themselves, the cumulative effect is quite remarkable. The Law School Admission Council has reported an increase in applicants to ABA accredited law schools of 15.7%. Hats off to Associate Dean Faye Shealy for her outstanding work in the admissions area!

The Law Review staff is working steadily on the spring and summer issues. Issue three, due out in April, boasts some solid articles. On board are Professors George Rutherglen of the University of Virginia Law School with "The Contemporary Justification for Maritime Arrest and Attachment," and Michael Wells from the University of Georgia Law School with "The Impact of Substantive Interests on the Law of Federal Courts." Yale Law School research fellow Laura Underkuffler has also contributed an article entitled, "Discrimination on the Basis of Religion: An Examination of Attempted Value Neutrality in Employment." Issue four, the summer issue, will feature articles by Professors David Barnes at the University of Denver College of Law and James Ratner of the University of Arizona Law School, and book reviews by Dean Gene Nichol of the University of Colorado at Boulder, and columnist Bruce Fein.

The Review is also pleased to announce the establishment of the Law Review Alumni Association! The Association will promote and support the Review's professional and social activities. Our first Association activity, which will take place on April 21 following the pig roast, will feature a cocktail/dessert hour and a speaker. The following alumni have already joined the group:

The Marshall-Wythe Office of Admissions Reports a Banner Year!

Timothy J. Sullivan, Dean of Marshall-Wythe since 1985, has been appointed to a four-year term on the Virginia Board of Education. He is a 1966 graduate of the College and received his law degree from Harvard University in 1969.

Former U.S. Senator and former Dean of Marshall-Wythe, William B. Spong, Jr., has been named interim president of Old Dominion University. Spong was Dean of Marshall-Wythe from 1976 until 1985. In addition, President Spong was named one of fifteen laureates in October 1988 by the Virginia Cultural Laureate Society in ceremonies at the State Capitol.

In every way it was a classic legal battle. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, one of the nation's best-known ministers and a political activist through the Moral Majority, against Larry Flynt, one of the nation's least-liked publishers. Few people find his magazine, Hustler, to have redeeming moral value. Hustler parodied a Campari Liqueur "first-time celebrity" ad by lampooning Falwell as losing his virginity to his mother in an outhouse. It's hard to think of anything more offensive, and Falwell was not amused. He sued Flynt for libel, for using his name and likeness without his consent and for "intentional infliction of emotional distress."

Only the last of those three issues went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court in what turned out to be a classic First Amendment case, centering on whether such an ad was an expression of opinion protected by the Constitution.

Rodney Smolla of the College of William and Mary has used this important case to explore every aspect of freedom of speech, the press and religion. It is a fascinating study that should be of interest to anyone who wants to see how the judicial system works.

Conflicts on which the Supreme Court was asked to rule include these basic questions:

* Should there be an uninhibited marketplace of ideas or should the marketplace be inhibited by granting government latitude to regulate that market in the service of elevating the level of public discourse?

* Is all speech created equal, or are there different types of speech of different value, creating a hierarchy in which legal protection increases with the importance of the speech?

* Is all speech, or is some speech, so taboo that it is completely outside the protection of the First Amendment?

* What is the relation between the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech, its injunction against the establishment of religion and its guarantee of the free exercise of religion?

* Can government penalize speech for being blasphemous and sacrilegious so as to permit persons freely to exercise their religious beliefs without harassment or persecution?

The unanimous ruling, announced on Feb. 24, will go down as one of the most important in the history of the First Amendment. The opinion, written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, says that even if someone's outrageously voiced opinion inflicts emotional distress, no damages may be claimed. Only when statements are false and printed with actual malice can the law be invoked to collect possible damages.

This book is a worthwhile guide to the legal path that led to that ruling.

William & Mary Public Service Fund Moves Ahead

The Public Service Fund provides $2,000 stipends to law students so that they may do pro bono work for ten weeks over the summer. The Fund raises money through efforts such as selling T-shirts and mugs, dinner date auctions and pledge drives. This will provide two stipends over the summer of 1989. Our goal is to offer at least three stipends for the 1989 summer. To date the Fund has raised over $20,000. No small potatoes for a student-run program!

1980's

Quick Update from Meade Spotts '82 . . .

Jeff & Maureen Gilmore are busy raising the new family in No. Va. While Jeff is no Mr. Mom, fortunately he has a wife to support him while he tries out the new role. Both Gilmores are now practicing in Virginia.

Jeff Nelson is preparing to experience parenthood for the second time, with Eileen being due some time in the spring.

I had the privilege (?) of entertaining James Wright of Anchorage, Alaska for two weeks in October. Had a little help from Steve Russell, Arlington (very little). Steve took us out on the Chesapeake for a three day sail in his house (yes, he lives in the boat), and announced his upcoming marriage. The young lady apparently is studying abnormal psychology and finds Steve an excellent subject. A spring wedding and lots of children are planned.

Jim Wright has had to postpone his wedding, as Alaskan authorities learned that the polar bear was under age. He always did chase the undergrads . . . . . . . . He invites all classmates to Alaska this spring for the 1st Annual Marshall-Wythe Salmon Fishing & Moose Dropping Festival.

J. Stanley Payne, Jr., '80, married Carol Hanretta on October 9, 1988. He is Executive Vice President of Meehan Overseas Terminal, Ltd., which operates Richmond Deepwater Terminal and whose parent operates several marine terminals around the country.

C. Harper Anderson, Professor of Law

by Laura Frick, Virginia Gazette Reporter

C. Harper Anderson of Williamsburg, a longtime lawyer and law professor, and former city attorney, died Feb. 25 at Williamsburg Community Hospital. He was 68.

Mr. Anderson was Williamsburg city attorney during 1967-1972 and was law professor at Marshall-Wythe School of Law, College of William and Mary, during 1942-1977.

“He was a fine lawyer and a fine gentleman,” said Vernon Geddy, Jr., former city mayor and long-time practicing lawyer. “He was a real straight arrow. He set high standards for young lawyers to follow in their professional life.”

Tim Sullivan, dean of Marshall-Wythe Law School, called Mr. Anderson a model scholar teacher and seasoned lawyer.

“He embodied the best qualities of our profession. He will be remembered with affection and respect by a whole generation of William and Mary law students,” he said.

“He was absolutely loved by his students,” said Bob Emmett of Williamsburg Group Inc., formerly of Anderson, Emmett and Franck. “It was like having a favorite uncle teach you.”

Mr. Anderson also was senior partner at Anderson and Franck Attorneys at Law.

“His life was practicing law, and he loved it more than anything,” said Gregory R. Davis, ’86, attorney at Anderson and Franck. “He was a learned man,” Davis added. “He loved to teach.” Mr. Anderson would tell his students to put down their pencils, as he was going to tell them a true story. He was consulted often by other attorneys, he said.

Born in Hopkinsville, KY., Mr. Anderson graduated from William and Mary, the University of Virginia, and Harvard Business School. He was a director of the Williamsburg Crestar Bank and a member of the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church, where he was a former deacon and elder.

A Navy veteran of World War II, Mr. Anderson was a member of the Order of the Coif and a former member of the Williamsburg Rotary Club.

He is survived by his wife, Barbara J. Anderson; two sons, C. Harper Anderson Jr. of New York City and Scott Lewis Anderson of Williamsburg; and one brother, Dr. William M. Anderson of Williamsburg.

The family requests that expressions of sympathy take the form of contributions to the C. Harper Anderson Scholarship Fund at Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Williamsburg, 23185.
