James E. Moliterno

James E. Moliterno is the Tazewell Taylor Professor of Law, Director of the Legal Skills Program, and Director of Clinical Programs at William & Mary where he has been since 1988. From 1997-2000 he also served as Vice Dean of the Law School.

He is author or co-author of four books: Ethics of the Lawyer's Work; An Introduction to Law, Law Study, and the Lawyer's Role; Professional Responsibility; and Cases and Materials on the Law Governing Lawyers. He has also written numerous articles on legal ethics and the teaching of legal ethics.

The Legal Skills Program, under his direction, has been recognized as a model for the teaching of professional skills and ethics, receiving the inaugural ABA Gambrell Professionalism Award in 1991. The Program has been visited by representatives of numerous law faculties, including those from schools in Japan, Russia, Czech Republic, and Australia. Since 2004, Professor Moliterno has been a consultant with the National Center for State Courts Serbia Rule of Law Project, designing and implementing lawyer skills and legal ethics courses in Serbian Law Schools. He also has advised Japanese law faculty on their adoption of programs modeled on the W&M Skills Program.

Professor Moliterno directs the Center for the Teaching of Legal Ethics, established at William & Mary by a grant from the W.M. Keck Foundation. Under this grant, William & Mary hosted two national conferences on teaching legal ethics. He has spoken often on ethics issues at academic, bar, and bench functions, and he has worked with law schools designing skills and ethics teaching programs.

Jim has been a dedicated member of the Law School community, receiving the John Marshall Prize in 2001. His public service work has included pro bono consulting and serving as an expert witness in death penalty cases involving issues of lawyer misconduct. A member of the American Law Institute, he has held committee leadership roles in both the AALS and ABA.
