Chief Justice Rehnquist First Carter O. Lowance Fellow

by Elaine Justice

Chief Justice of the United States, William Rehnquist, spent several days meeting with students and faculty of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in October 1990 as the first Carter O. Lowance Fellow in Law and Public Service. The Lowance Fellowship is supported by an endowment established by friends who wished to honor the career of the distinguished Virginian and former executive vice president of the college. The sole criterion for recipients of the fellowship is distinguished public service.

At a luncheon on October 19, those who were instrumental in creating the fellowship were present to see the Chief Justice presented with a handsome medallion, a profile in bronze of Lowance, created by his friend, Carl Roseberg, professor of fine arts emeritus.

Dean Timothy J. Sullivan introduced Mrs. Carter Lowance and other distinguished guests. Sullivan said that the fellowship could not have been created without "the help of some remarkable people." He recognized the leaders of the fund-raising effort, Roy Smith of Petersburg, a former member of the Virginia House of Delegates; Vernon M. Geddy, former mayor of Williamsburg; former U. S. Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr.; and former governors Mills E. Godwin and Albertis S. Harrison.

Godwin, who spoke to the group of about 80 faculty, students and guests, said, "Although I have known many special people, I don't know of any more complete person than the one whose name is attached to this award." Godwin called Lowance, who was aware of the establishment of the fellowship before his death last fall, "a supremely modest man" who "became the premier public servant of his time." Speaking of his own second-term campaign for Governor of Virginia in 1973, Godwin spoke stirringly of his friendship and regard for Lowance, saying he "needed him as few Julius Chambers, Counsel to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal Defense and Education Fund accepted the 1989-90 Marshall-Wythe Medallion during Charter Day in February 1991. Chambers was unable to accept the award last year. After an informal lunch with students, he delivered a lecture to the College community on the Bill of Rights and the individual liberties it protects.

people might imagine" and that "no one has done more to protect the integrity of Virginia's government."

In accepting the award, Chief Justice Rehnquist said that although he never knew Carter Lowance, he was "very honored to receive an award named for this distinguished Virginian." He noted the value of the fellowship program, in which "recipients can talk with students about what public service means in the hope that others will render such service to their state and their nation."

Before closing the luncheon ceremony, Sullivan announced that the second Carter Lowance Fellow would be former U. S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, who will be on campus in September 1991.

Sullivan also announced that a provision in Lowance's will would result in the establishment of scholarships in his name. "We will in due course establish the Carter Lowance Scholarship Endowment to provide in perpetuity scholarships to men and women law students who evince a commitment to public service," said Sullivan.

Bulgaria's Search Enlightened Verkuil
by Wilford Kale
Times-Dispatch state staff

Paul R. Verkuil, president of the College of William and Mary, said that last week "the Constitution came alive for me and changed me forever."

But Dr. Verkuil, a constitutional scholar specializing in the separation of powers among the executive, judicial and legislative branches, was not talking about an event in the United States.

He was recalling his visit March 11-16 to Bulgaria.

"I never lived the Constitution as I have in this experience," Dr. Verkuil said. "It puts everything you do in perspective when you see this country struggling with these principles that we take for granted and they want so much to share in."

Since World War II, Bulgaria had been one of the most Stalinist of all Communist countries under the control of a dictator for 45 years.

"Suddenly, they've broken free and are really interested in developing a democratic institution," Dr. Verkuil said.

As part of an American Bar Association program, Dr. Verkuil visited Sofia, the capital, to help the leadership develop and write a new constitution.

There are 14 constitutional drafts being circulated, including versions written by monarchists, Communists or socialists, and the United Democratic Front, a combination of opposition groups.

"I have a very optimistic feeling" about the future of Bulgaria and the evolution of the constitution, Dr. Verkuil explained. "They were very forthcoming, not defensive about their system, eager for advice and counsel, and that made me feel more confident in making suggestions."

He added that no one in his group, which included Michael Davidson, legal counsel to the U.S. Senate; Herman Schwartz, a human rights lawyer and professor at American University School of Law, and Laurence J. Aurbach, an attorney and local government specialist, was there "to lecture anyone or tell them what to do."

"We were responding to questions. We ensured that our role was not one to try to give them a solution, but rather help them to find their own solutions... In terms of my spending time, I can't remember any five days that I've been more stimulated, inspired, and gratified by the activity."

Dr. Verkuil said he wants to stay involved with the Bulgarian democratic evolution and maybe return in the summer.

He noted that in terms of separation of powers, the Bulgarians are very skeptical about a powerful chief executive because of their past experience with dictators.

"I got the sense that (their) arguments about a strong executive were not different from the Federalists and Anti-Federalists debating 200 years ago," Dr. Verkuil said. "The fears in those days were of a strong executive coming from the monarchy of England."

Dr. Verkuil said the Bulgarians also are fearful of the delegation of powers to a bureaucracy "because there is concern that the bureaucracy is a lot of the same people in power in the local communities." Therefore, the local government becomes another main issue — whether to grant autonomy or cede control to a central government, he added.

"The notion of independent judges is foreign" to Bulgaria, Dr. Verkuil said. "They also do not have judicial review and they don't have the infrastructure there to assert the power and to run the judiciary as an independent branch."

Dr. Verkuil said that in seeking democracy, Bulgarians were taking an unavoidable risk.

"It is a leap of faith to become a democratic system," he said.

Moot Court Sweeps Nationals

by Dave Edwards

Marshall-Wythe's National Moot Court team of Monica Taylor, Ann Mayhew, and Steve Nachman swept the National Tournament in New York to restore William and Mary to the coveted position of National Moot Court champion. The team won first place overall and "best brief" award, and Monica Taylor earned the distinction of "best oralist." The National Moot Court tournament, which is sponsored by the American College of Trial Lawyers and the New York City Bar Association, is considered the most prestigious of moot court tournaments. The last such "triple sweep" at Nationals by Marshall-Wythe occurred in 1989 at the hands of Elizabeth Deininger, Michael McAuliffe, and Joe Gerbasi.

The National competition began with 28 teams representing the first and second place winners in nationwide regional competitions. The Marshall-Wythe team reached the finals after a succession of wins against such teams as Case Western, University of Georgia, and Baylor. The final round allowed Nachman, Taylor and Mayhew to deal yet another defeat to the University of North Carolina. The UNC team had met its first final round defeat by the trio in regional competition in Richmond, after edging out William and Mary's team of Tamara Maddox, Jeff Euchler and Sabrina Johnson in the previous round.

Nachman, Taylor and Mayhew returned with seven trophies, a cash prize earmarked for the Moot Court program, the right to one year's free use of a WESTLAW computer for Moot Court, and a four day, all-expenses-paid trip to the American College of Trial Lawyer's convention in Hawaii.

The trio expressed their thanks and appreciation to all of the faculty who helped judge practice rounds, and especially to Judy Ledbetter, Moot Court's faculty advisor.

Dave Edwards is a second-year student at Marshall-Wythe.

Academic Credit Approved for Moot Court

Moot Court bar members now have the option to receive one pass/fail academic credit during the semester of their moot court competition. In their April meeting the Marshall-Wythe faculty approved the Moot Court Board's proposal to award credit through enrollment in Independent Legal Research or Independent Legal Writing beginning Fall, 1991.
PSF Success Abounds
by Littleton Tazewell

In a recent study conducted by the Washington Legal Foundation, the William and Mary Public Service Fund (PSF) was ranked in the top ten law schools among student-run public interest law fund-raising organizations. The study measured the ratio of money raised to the total student enrollment of each school. Among other schools listed in the top ten were Yale, Cornell and the University of Michigan.

This year PSF received a record 31 applications for funding, more than the last three years combined. Fortunately, through the generosity of students, faculty and alumni, PSF awarded over $32,000.00 in stipends this year. PSF and the Office of Career Planning and Placement worked closely together to match College Work Study (CWS) funds, PSF money and Virginia Law Foundation's Interest on Lawyer Trust Accounts (IOLTA) funds in a way that afforded the greatest number of students the opportunity to work in public interest positions.

PSF was founded four years ago to address the increasing legal crisis among indigent people and the traditionally under-represented. Our Volunteer Board achieves this goal in a surprisingly simple manner. We conduct a variety of fund-raising activities throughout the academic year. The proceeds from these events are awarded to selected Marshall-Wythe students who work with public interest organizations over the summer. Each student is eligible for a scholarship up to $2,500.00 for ten weeks of full-time work.

Contributions to PSF from Alumni are always welcome and can be made as restricted gifts to the Annual Fund.

Littleton Tazewell is a member of the class of 1991 and winner of the Draper's Scholarship.

Funding from the Public Service Fund provided support for 22 first and second-year students to work in a variety of public interest organizations, including:

Merger Results in New Journal at Marshall-Wythe

The Colonial Lawyer and The Institute of Bill of Rights Law Journal are pleased to announce their successful merger and the creation of The William and Mary Bill of Rights and Public Policy Law Journal. The new journal will publish both student and professional articles concerning Bill of Rights issues and Virginia public policy issues. The editors are currently accepting submissions to be considered for the first issue scheduled for publication this fall.

Anyone interested in submitting articles for review or subscribing for $16.00 a year, should contact Matthew Pullen, editor-in-chief, or Stephen Schofield, managing editor, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Institute of Bill of Rights Law, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

The advent of the Fall, 1991 semester will bring with it two new permanent and two visiting professors. Peter Alces and Michael Gerhardt — both visiting professors in 1990-91 — have received and accepted offers to join the law school faculty on a permanent basis. Alces fills the position of commercial law scholar, which has been vacant since Ingrid Hillinger departed in 1988, and Gerhardt joins the faculty as a constitutional law scholar. Visitors Paul Marcus, a noted criminal law expert, and Stephen Wermiel, a Supreme Court correspondent for the Wall Street Journal, will join the faculty this fall.

According to Professor Lynda Butler, who Chairs the Faculty Appointment Committee, the offers to Gerhardt and Alces were the result of a two to three year search for an expert in commercial law and an excellent "generalist" to fill existing spaces in the ranks of the Marshall-Wythe faculty.

Marcus served as the dean of the University of Arizona Law School for five years before returning to their faculty. Many second and third year students will recognize Paul Marcus as co-author of their criminal law casebook.

The successful recruitment of Stephen Wermiel as next year's Lee Professor resulted from the efforts of Professor Rodney Smolla. Smolla believes Wermiel will prove to be a "different and interesting appointment" who "should be able to offer a unique insight into the Supreme Court." In addition to being the Wall Street Journal's Supreme Court correspondent, Wermiel is writing the authorized biography of Supreme Court Justice William Brennan.

Welcome Page Hayhurst!
The Law School's New Assistant Director of Development and Alumni Affairs

We are delighted to report that as of April 3rd, Ms. Page Hayhurst joined the law school administration as the new assistant director of development and alumni affairs. Page will play a major role in fund-raising for the annual fund, and the management of the alumni affairs program and publications.

Most recently, Page worked as the director of development at the Roanoke Fine Arts Museum. She was the museum's first development officer and has experience in fund-raising, event planning, and publication production.

Prior to her experience in Roanoke, Page worked in Richmond as development assistant for another community arts organization, while simultaneously pursuing an M.A. in Humanities from the University of Richmond. Page is a 1988 graduate of the College of William and Mary.

We very much look forward to introducing you to Page at our upcoming alumni events.

Associate Dean Robert Kaplan Selected to NALP Board of Directors

In June 1991, Associate Dean Robert Kaplan begins his one year term as a member of the Board of Directors for the National Association of Law Placement (NALP). As one of five law school representatives on the nine member board, Kaplan will help formulate and enforce national policies and procedures for law school employment recruiting. He will also serve as a liaison to various NALP committees. Kaplan practiced employment law in Cincinnati, Ohio, before joining the Marshall-Wythe staff as Associate Dean for Career Planning and Placement five years ago.

Professor John Donaldson Selected Fellow of Virginia Law Foundation

Professor John Donaldson has been selected as a Fellow of the Virginia Law Foundation, an honor accorded to Virginia lawyers whose leadership in the private bar, in government or in public service is deemed to be outstanding.

Congratulation to the Class of 1991!

GOOD NEWS!
Annual Fund Update
1990-91
by Chris Mellott '80

As Chairman of this year’s Law School Annual Fund, I am pleased to report that over 900 of our alumni and friends have donated over $235,000 to this year’s Annual Fund. This places us on track to reach our goal of $275,000. We remain slightly ahead of last year’s pace. The Annual Fund raised $75,000 during the final two months of last year's campaign.

In order for us to reach this year’s goal, it is essential that we meet and exceed that same major level of contribution through the campaign’s conclusion on June 28th.

As you are all aware, it is especially important this year that we meet our Annual Fund goal due to reduced funding from the Commonwealth. As indicated in Dean Sullivan’s letter of March 25, 1991, continued growth of our law school is directly linked to the support of its alumni. This places us in the top quarter for alumni participation among public law schools. Let’s aim to be in the top 10%. Don’t delay in mailing your check to the Law School Annual Fund, as the deadline is June 28th.

WILLIAMSBURG, VA — An alumnus of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College of William and Mary who has requested anonymity has made a gift of $100,000 to the law school. The gift has been made in honor of Ernest W. Goodrich, a 1935 graduate of the College.

Goodrich, a resident of Surry, was a member of William and Mary’s Board of Visitors from 1964 through 1972, serving as rector for two years. From 1946 through 1950, he was a lecturer at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. He has recently retired from law practice.

The gift will establish an endowment, the income from which may be used at the discretion of the dean to best benefit the law school. Since the start of The Campaign for the Fourth Century, the law school foundation’s assets have grown nearly tenfold, from $562,000 to $4.9 million.

The law school gratefully acknowledges the following contributions to the 1989-90 Annual Fund. We deeply regret omitting these names from the William and Mary Lawyer.

CALLING ALL ALUMNI!

Join us for a Dean's Reception
During the ABA Conference in Atlanta
August 12, 1991
Time and place to be determined

To receive an invitation contact: The Office of Development and Alumni Affairs, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Williamsburg, VA 23185 or call (804) 221-3795.
Dear Marshall-Wythe Graduates:

I write to request your assistance in maximizing employment opportunities for current students. As you know, the economic uncertainties and downturn in law hiring during the past academic law year created difficulties for law students nationwide. Our students, while certainly faring better than most of their counterparts elsewhere, nevertheless were not immune from the tighter job market. Unfortunately, all indicators point to continued sluggish hiring in the year ahead.

Dean Sullivan has highlighted in past publications the truly remarkable credentials of our student body. I encourage you to take advantage of this talented pool by registering with the Office of Career Planning and Placement if you or your organization will hire summer or entry level candidates during the 1991-92 academic year. Our services include on-campus interviewing and forwarding resumes to employers unable to visit the Law School.

The Law School has made significant progress in the past five years in developing a comprehensive career services office. One of the most visible signs of those efforts is the dramatic increase in employment opportunities for our students. Please write or call (804) 221-3805 so that, together we can sustain the momentum even in these difficult economic times.

Sincerely,

Robert E. Kaplan
Associate Dean

Please return to Robert E. Kaplan, William and Mary Law School, South Henry Street, Williamsburg, VA 23185, or fax to (804) 221-3261.

Our organization would like to recruit Marshall-Wythe students during the 1991-92 academic year. Please contact:

Virginia Till Lemmon '47
Marshall-Wythe's First Law Librarian

by Kathleen Finley

Virginia Till Lemmon '47 was among the first women to graduate from Marshall-Wythe. She has held many distinguished positions during her career, from Associate Professor at Rutgers University to Library Assistant for the United States Supreme Court. Her first professional position, and perhaps a catalyst to her success, was as Marshall-Wythe's first law librarian from the fall of 1947 until 1949.

While the law library now contains over 250,000 volumes and employs five full-time librarians, Lemmon recalls that in 1947 the collection was quite small and the librarian position was new and not considered particularly important. Technical services were still a part of the main library system. From 1941 to 1947, a designated member of the law faculty, along with one or two student assistants, administered the library functions. Last year, the law library was renovated to provide new staff and librarian offices as well as a new circulation desk and a room of non-circulating volumes.

In June, 1989, Lemmon retired after ten years of service as a reference librarian at Rutgers Law School in Newark, New Jersey. Her colleagues at Rutgers noted that she served with distinction and was awarded tenure. At Rutgers, she created a self-guided tour of the library for students, indexed the Rutgers Law Review, and acted as a founding member of the New Jersey Law Librarians Group (now NILLA) in 1981. Lemmon continues to be active in the NILLA.

Prosecutor Trades Court for Comedy

by DeNeen L. Brown
Washington Post Staff Writer

The jury sat cross-legged, sipping beer and smoking cigarettes. The verdict unfolded in the laughter spilling over like stiff booze in a dark bar.

A woman in a white suit sitting on the edge of her chair at the back of the room kicked up her heels and cackled her judgment:

"He's funny," she said doubling over.

For assistant Fairfax County prosecutor Bob Battle, it was another night in the unforgiving court of professional entertainment.

For three years, Battle has lived a Batman-like existence, prosecuting by day and executing his comedy routine by night at local clubs, cafes and bar associations — slipping about on the comedy circuit, then back to court in the morning.

Last year, the 31-year-old Battle ended his dual roles, retiring as an assistant commonwealth's attorney to become a full-time comedian.

As a prosecutor, Battle wore a look of suits, wire-rim glasses and seriousness. As a comedian Thursday night at Tyson's Comedy Corner on Route 7, Battle made his case in a Goofy T-shirt and sneakers — much of it humor with a legal spin.

Court provides some of his best material in the act, which includes impressions of Elvis and Michael Jackson greeting a gang in a New York subway.

When Battle, introduced as a prosecutor, climbed on stage Thursday night, his title was greeted with hisses. The audience, which at times has included former defendants, was not sure what to expect.

"The fact that he's a prosecutor doing comedy makes them skeptical in the beginning," said Ron Maranian, owner of Tyson's Comedy Corner, who spotted Battle a few years ago at a local club. "But in a couple of minutes, that fear or hesitancy dissolved and everybody is forgetting their problems, and that's the testimonial to comedy."

A few months ago, Battle decided to quit prosecuting and follow his calling.

"People like comedians," he said. "People hate lawyers."

Last year, he competed in D.C.'s funniest lawyer contest and was a finalist in a local comedy competition. As a safety net, he said, he can always practice law on the side if the money gets low.

"He's a popular guy," said Tricia Sweeney, a New York agent who recruited Battle for an audition for a commercial. "He uses what's really happening, people getting busted for drunk driving and what they tell the judge or the cop. I think when he leaves and he's able to concentrate on that, he'll do very well."

Battle, who was bitten by the comedy bug in college, grew up in Alexandria, where his father was an FBI agent. At the University of Notre Dame, he hit the stage for the first time at a senior roast and had to wait minutes for the laughter to stop. At William and Mary Law School, which he calls the school of Fred and Wilma, he participated in a student show, Libel Night.

Battle said his career as a comic has helped soften the stereotype some defense lawyers and defendants have of prosecutors. "It takes me out of the image of the prosecutor as a Nazi who has no sense of humor and places himself on a pedestal."

"I respect the defense attorney," he said. "Some guy might come up and ask for the moon. In general, I'm pretty easygoing and approachable. At least I hear them out and then I say no."

Battle said he hopes his days as a lawyer are limited. "I just signed a big contract with cable television," he said proudly onstage.

"Yeah, $40 a month plus free installation."
