Jason M. Solomon joined the William & Mary faculty in 2010 from the University of Georgia School of Law, where he taught for five years and received the John C. O'Byrne Memorial Student-Faculty Award. One of the nation's outstanding young tort law scholars, he has published several articles in leading journals, including in the Northwestern, Texas, Wisconsin, and Vanderbilt law reviews. His scholarship focuses on the theory and practice of civil justice, and his research interests also include regulatory theory and policy, and the law of the workplace. He currently teaches Torts, Employment Law, and Administrative Law at the Law School.

Prior to entering academia, Professor Solomon served as Chief of Staff to the President of Harvard University, and clerked for Judge Chester Straub of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and Judge John Gleeson of the Eastern District of New York. Professor Solomon graduated magna cum laude from Harvard College and received his J.D. from Columbia Law School, where he was a James Kent Scholar and Notes Editor on the Columbia Law Review. Before law school, he worked in the White House and U.S. Treasury Department under President Clinton.
