William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal

About this Journal

Since 1992, the William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal has published important scholarship in constitutional law. Published four times per year - in October, December, March, and June - the journal is the third most-cited student-edited constitutional law journal by Washington and Lee University. The Journal is a student publication of the William & Mary School of Law.

Current Issue:

Introduction

This issue contains articles from the Symposium: Privacy, Democracy, and Elections. The articles are articles from the 2010 Brigham-Kanner Property Rights Conference.

Tax TARP Needed for Year One and Year Two Returns of Executive Bonus to TARP Recipient: A Case Study of Year One Rescission/Exclusion From Income and Year Two Deduction Under Section 1341

Abstract
This Article addresses the tax consequences to AIG Financial employees who repay their controversial retention bonuses in the year of receipt (Year 1) or in a subsequent year (Year 2). At the time the executives received their bonuses, the media and members of Congress raised challenges that might induce such repayment, thus justifying favorable tax treatment for repaying executives. Accordingly, bonuses repaid in year 1 should be excluded from gross income under the doctrine of Year 1 rescission. Bonuses repaid in Year 2 should result in an adjustment under Section 1341, which reduces the income taxes for Year 2 by the amount that the income taxes for Year 1 would have been reduced if the repaid bonus hypothetically had been excluded from income in Year 1.

This analysis is based upon a “balancing-entry approach” which backs out a Year 1 transaction when an assumption at the time of Year 1 receipt (that the employee would get to keep the bonus) later turns out to have been in error. This balancing-entry approach is traced across a number of case law and statutory doctrines including the claim of right doctrine, the Crane-Tufts doctrine, and rescission and cancellation in Year 1. Contrary interpretations exist, however, manifesting the need for Congressional or administrative clarification so as to encourage repayments of such controversial bonuses.

What we’ve learned in the past year.

PROS AND CONS
Pros

- Entire journal archive loaded in 3 months
- 18 collections within a school year
- Continuity in procedure
- Introduced the repository to future law review staff members
Cons

- Missing pages in purchased content
- Difficulties in getting content with staff turnover
- Too many simultaneous projects
- Students created as much work as they produced
What would we change?

- Fewer simultaneous collections
- Fewer students
- Purchase all additional hardware and software first
