Dean Emeritus Dudley Warner Woodbridge received the newly established Jefferson Award as the person in the College community who "best exemplifies the ideals of Thomas Jefferson" at the Charter Day Convocation on February 8, 1963. The Convocation marked the 270th anniversary of the granting of the royal charter to the College from their majesties King William and Queen Mary.

The $500 award, financed by a gift from the Robert Earll McConnell Foundation of Florida, was presented by the Hon. C. Sterling Hutcheson, Rector of the Board of Visitors of the College.

In recognition of the event an editorial appeared in the Daily Press under date of Tuesday, February 12, 1963. We know that the alumni would wish to have the full text of this editorial and it is therefore quoted in full.

EVER SO MANY SHARE HIS RARE GIFT

Once upon a time, a young law student sat in one of the classrooms of the venerable College of William and Mary, preparing for the state bar examinations in a special session of coaching aimed at those exams.

Not long afterward, the young student, now a fledgling lawyer, stood before the bar of one of Virginia's courts, arguing his first case. Asked for a reference for his legal point, he said, "Virginia Bar Notes," and the Judge nodded, accepting the authority for the point under discussion.

The coach of those special classes, the author of those "Virginia Bar Notes," the man chosen for national recognition by a select panel as one of the nation's eight great teachers a dozen years ago was signally honored as the recipient of the first Thomas Jefferson Award at the College's annual Charter Day on Friday last.

Visibly astounded at the award, Dr. Dudley Warner Woodbridge gathered his academic robes about him and stood, tall and stately, to receive the honor amid wave after wave of cheering from students, masters and friends of the College.

Now chancellor professor of law emeritus, Dr. Woodbridge maintains a full schedule of law classes at the nation's oldest school of law, carrying on the philosophies and doctrines, as Judge Sterling K. Hutcheson said in making the award, as "an individual who not exemplifies so conspicuously the interests and activities that characterized Jefferson, but one who has brought added prestige to the original professorship of law in America, a professorship which was created primarily at the urging of Thomas Jefferson."

The longtime Dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has retired from his administrative duties, it is true, but in continuing his special coaching classes, and his schedule of work with the young men and women of the School of Law, Dudley Warner Woodbridge is teaching not only the value of the law, but also the right of it.

In Jefferson's time there was an American theologian of note, Nathaniel Emmons. He might have been writing about William and Mary's great man of jurisprudence when he set down, "He is a learned man who understands one subject; a very learned man who understands two."

Dr. Dudley Warner Woodbridge stands as a man of the law, a knowledgeable man. But he also stands as a man who understands the young students who absorb his familiarity with the law and his love of it, who sit before him preparing for a license to practice the law, and finally, those who go forth armed with his principles as recognized standards.

Professor Arthur W. Phelps' new book, DIVORCE AND ALIMONY IN VIRGINIA AND WEST VIRGINIA, was published in January by the Michie Company, Law Publishers, Charlottesville. The book examines every statute in Virginia and West Virginia on the subject of divorce and alimony with a complete discussion on their meaning. Each case in the two states has been reviewed in the light of the present statutory law with an interpretation of the case law. It includes a complete set of forms, taking a fictitious case from the bill of complaint through the final decree by the Supreme Court of Appeals.

The George Wythe Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity in conjunction with the Virginia State Alumni Chapter hosted the Fourteenth Annual Conclave of District XII on Friday and Saturday, February 22 and 23. The meetings, with the exception of the banquet which was held at the Lafayette Restaurant, were held at the Holiday Inn. District XII includes fourteen student and five alumni chapters and covers the entire Atlantic Seaboard from Delaware to South Carolina. The functions of the Conclave are to provide an opportunity for the chapters in the District to meet and to discuss common problems, give the local chapters a sense of belonging to a national group, and to provide a better understanding of the meaning of membership in Phi Alpha Delta. It is through Fraternity workshops and informal conversations that these ends can be achieved. Speakers at the Conclave were Joseph B. Bulman, who delivered an address on "Demonstrative Evidence" at the luncheon meeting on Saturday; and Judge Alex A. Hotchkiss, the Supreme Marshal of Phi Alpha Delta who spoke at the banquet. Other honored guests were Robert E. Redding, Second Supreme Vice-Justice of Phi Alpha Delta; and, William Robertson, Past District Justice. Visitors were welcomed on behalf of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law by Acting Dean Joseph Curtis at the Opening of the Conclave on Saturday morning. Social activities included a reception on Friday night and a cocktail party before the banquet on Saturday night. Following the banquet, there was a dance with music provided by the Frank Wells Orchestra. Members of the George Wythe Chapter who served as District officers were: Scott Hester, Justice; Allan H. Harbert, Clerk; and, Emeric Fischer, Treasurer. It is believed that the Conclave was very successful and that the activities proved not only pleasant but also informative to all the delegates and other members of Phi Alpha Delta who attended.

TAX CONFERENCE

The Eighth Annual Tidewater Tax Conference sponsored by the Law School was held on the campus on December 8, 1962, with 252 accountants, attorneys and others interested in the 1962 Tax Legislation in attendance. A recording was made of the ESTATE PLANNING PANEL discussion. This is now being prepared for the printer and a copy will be mailed to all Law School Alumni during April. A general distribution will also be made to other attorneys, Law Libraries and national publishers of tax materials.
MID-WINTER LAW REVIEW
The first semi-annual issue of the Law Review is now in the hands of the printer and will be available for distribution during April. The commendable upsurge in student interest, research and contribution of high quality articles compelled the adoption of this extra issue.

DUES NOW PAYABLE
The books are now open for the receipt of 1963 William and Mary Law School Association dues. Enclosed with this Newsletter is a statement for the dues. It is sent not with the idea of dunning anyone, but in the sincere hope that it will serve as a convenient reminder. If you have already paid your dues for 1963, please ignore it. Yet a word about the importance of supporting the Association is appropriate. The Marshall-Wythe School of Law is definitely on the move! Our freshman class is one of the largest and most enthusiastic in recent years and all indications point to our continued development and improvement. The Association serves a most important function in our development encouraging the law student to excel in his studies and eventual practice of law through prize incentives, cooperation in obtaining speakers for law school functions, and providing assistance in entering the practice of law. In turn, the law school attempts to be of service to the individual members of the Association by providing a home base for the exchange of professional ideas through the medium of the William and Mary Law Review (now published twice a year), and just plain keeping in contact with each other. All of this is a big job, but it is an important and worthwhile job. The Association wants your support, needs your support, and cordially invites you to participate in all of its activities, announced from time to time through this Newsletter. Please make your check payable to the William and Mary Law School Association and mail it to Professor James P. Whyte, Treasurer, today.
