ANTHONY LEWIS joined the staff of The New York Times in 1948. He is a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner for national reporting: in 1955, for a series of articles in the Washington Daily News, and in 1963, for distinguished reporting in his coverage of the Supreme Court's proceedings in that year. Lewis lectured at Harvard Law School for fifteen years, teaching a course on the Constitution and the Press. He has been a visiting professor at a number of schools, including the Universities of California, Illinois, Oregon, and Arizona. Since 1983, Lewis has been the James Madison Visiting Professor of First Amendment Issues at Columbia University. In 1969, he began a regular column for the Times on both national and international affairs, which he later continued from a new base in Boston, with frequent visits abroad, until his retirement from the Times last year.

Mr. Lewis is the author of several acclaimed books, including Portrait of a Decade: The Second American Revolution (1964), which chronicles the Civil Rights movement in the United States; Gideon's Trumpet (1989), which provides a history of James Earl Gideon's landmark Supreme Court case about his right to legal counsel; and Make No Law: The Sullivan Case and the First Amendment (1992), which is an account of a Montgomery, Alabama official's 1960 libel suit against The New York Times for its criticism of Montgomery's response to civil rights protests.

In 2002, he lectured in Australia. He also was the Visiting Lombard Lecturer at the Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics, and Public Policy at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government where he taught a course on the First Amendment. Mr. Lewis is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Cutler Lecture

The Cutler Lecture series was established in 1927 by James Gould Cutler of Rochester, New York, to provide an annual lecture at William & Mary by “an outstanding authority on the Constitution of the United States.” The original series of 16 lectures ran from 1928 to 1944. After a period of dormancy, the Cutler lectures were revived in 1980/81 under the auspices of the Law School, with each lecture published in the William and Mary Law Review.
