The Cutler Lecture

The Cutler Lecture series was established in 1927 by James Gould Cutler of Rochester, New York, to provide an annual lecture at the College of William & Mary by "an outstanding authority on the Constitution of the United States." The original series of 16 lectures ran from 1928 to 1944. After a period of dormancy, the Cutler Lectures were revived in the 1980-81 academic year under the auspices of the law school, with each lecture published in the William & Mary Law Review.

William Nichol Eskridge, Jr.

Professor Eskridge is a member of the faculty at the Georgetown University Law Center, where he teaches Constitutional Law, Civil Procedure and Legislation. He also has taught at both Stanford and Harvard Universities. He is the author of Statutes and the Creation of Public Policy (1987) and Dynamic Statutory Interpretation (1994) and the editor of Hart and Sacks -- The Legal Process (1994). He is also the author of a forthcoming casebook and treatise on sexuality and the law.

Professor Eskridge's scholarly writings have ranged from the political theory underlying the Constitution's Commerce Clause to the construction of First Amendment arguments for the protection of sodomy and other sexual expression. Professor Eskridge has written about same-sex marriage and the principles governing judicial review. He is a prolific writer, having published in the Harvard Law Review, University of Chicago Law Review, Yale Law Journal and Michigan Law Review, among many others. We are delighted that today's lecture will be expanded and reprinted in the William & Mary Law Review.
