“Diagonal Regulation and Climate Change”

A lecture by Hari Osofsky
Associate Professor of Law
Washington and Lee University

Monday, March 2

5 PM, Room 119, W&M Law School

In her lecturer, Professor Osofsky will explore the need for climate regulation at all levels of government to address the effects of greenhouse gas emissions. She is an associate professor of law at Washington and Lee University, and also is a Ph.D. student in the Department of Geography at the University of Oregon. Professor Osofsky has authored and edited several articles and books on climate change litigation, and law and geography. She has taught U.S. civil rights law at Sun Yat-sen University School of Law in China, has worked with several public interest groups advancing international environmental rights, and has conducted advocacy work for submissions to the U.N. Human Rights Commission and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights.
