1990

The Civil Rights Commission Backslides

Neal Devins

William & Mary Law School, nedevi@wm.edu

Repository Citation
https://scholarship.law.wm.edu/popular_media/275

Copyright c 1990 by the authors. This article is brought to you by the William & Mary Law School Scholarship Repository.
https://scholarship.law.wm.edu/popular_media
The Civil Rights Commission Backslides

By Maia Davis
Managing Editor, The Newark Post

The Newark Post has been named the Negro Press Association's Paper of the Year. A key factor in its success has been its vigorous coverage of civil rights issues. The Post has played an important role in raising awareness and mobilizing support for the civil rights movement. This year, the Post has been especially active in covering the activities of the Civil Rights Commission, a federal agency established to monitor and improve civil rights practices in the United States.

The Commission, which was created by the Civil Rights Act of 1964, has been criticized for its lack of action on several key issues. Critics have charged that the Commission has not done enough to protect the rights of African Americans and other minority groups. The Post has been critical of the Commission's failure to take effective action on these issues.

In response to these concerns, the Post has been running a series of articles examining the work of the Commission. The next article in this series will focus on the Commission's recent activities and will examine the challenges it faces as it continues to strive for civil rights.

For more information, please contact Maia Davis at the Newark Post.