LISTEN TO THE LEADERS IN LAW

ALBERT LOVE and JAMES SAXON CHILDERS, editors; Holt, Rinehart and Winston. $4.75.

These essays are aimed at law students—actual or prospective—and particularly at those on the brink of entering the profession. The idea of assembling sixteen such essays with such titles as “You in Trial Law”, “You in Corporation Law”, “Shall I Practice in a Small Community?”, and “What A Law Firm Will Expect of You” is an admirable one. Having them authored by such prominent contributors as Dean Griswold, Justices Frankfurter and Goldberg, and Edward Bennett Williams is an even better idea, and the combination of the two is worthwhile indeed. Perhaps not all of the names are quite so prominent as one might wish, and some contributors go in a bit too heavily for anecdote, but on the whole the advice is well worth any student’s time.
