William and Mary Law Review

The WILLIAM and MARY LAW REVIEW is the successor to the WILLIAM AND MARY REVIEW OF VIRGINIA LAW, which had its inception in mimeographed form in 1948. The period 1949-1956 was one of formal publication on a strictly intramural basis.

The present change in title and format represents a shift in editorial policy opening the opportunity for publications by non-student writers and expanding the range of subject matter which can be utilized. However, the primary objective remains to provide an opportunity for student legal composition and expression.

Views expressed in the contributions contained herein are those of the writers and do not necessarily constitute the opinions of the Editor, the Editorial Board, the Faculty, or the College of William and Mary.

WILLIAM AND MARY LAW REVIEW

JULY 1957

Entered at the Post Office at Williamsburg, Virginia, July 3, 1957, under act of August 24, 1912, as second class matter. Issued 11 times: January, February, three issues in March, one issue in April, two issues in June, one issue in July, one issue in August, and one in December.

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law

History. The Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the oldest in the United States, and the second oldest in the English speaking world, was established by Thomas Jefferson on December 4, 1779. George Wythe was selected as the first law professor. Among his famous students before, at, and after teaching at William and Mary were Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, and Henry Clay. The Law School flourished until the outbreak of the War Between the States. As a result of that war and its aftermath the School ceased to function until its revival in 1922.

Accreditation. The Law School is on the list of approved schools of the American Bar Association, is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, and is registered by the State Department of Education of the University of the State of New York.

Degrees. The degree of Bachelor of Civil Law will be awarded to those who satisfactorily complete ninety hours work in law over a period of at least ninety weeks and who have demonstrated their ethical fitness. This is a professional degree and is the equivalent of the more usual bachelor of laws degree.

The degree of Master of Law and Taxation will be awarded to students with a law degree who complete all the courses in taxation and the additional requirements in business administration and economics.

The degree of Master of Arts in the field of taxation will be awarded to students who complete the requirements of the program jointly sponsored by the Departments of Business Administration, Economics and the School of Law.

For further information concerning admission, scholarships and grants write to the Dean of Admissions or the Dean of the Law School.
