Greene to Give Seven Lectures at W&M

WILLIAMSBURG — Reconvened lawyer James E. Greene, president of the William and Mary Law School, will deliver a series of seven lectures at the college beginning Nov. 18. The lectures, which are sponsored by the Department of Law, are open to students and faculty of the law school.

In announcing the lecture series Wednesday, the dean said that Greene's address "warranted the serious consideration of this community." Greene, who has a master's degree from the University of Virginia, is considered one of the country's leading legal scholars.

The first lecture, on the role of the courts in society, will be delivered by Greene on Friday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the law school.

The remaining lectures, which will be delivered at 8 p.m. every other week, are:

- Nov. 25: "The Role of the Courts in the Criminal Justice System"
- Dec. 2: "The Role of the Courts in the Civil Rights Movement"
- Dec. 9: "The Role of the Courts in the Economy"
- Dec. 16: "The Role of the Courts in the International Arena"
- Jan. 13: "The Role of the Courts in the Family"
- Jan. 20: "The Role of the Courts in the Environment"
- Jan. 27: "The Role of the Courts in the Future of Democracy"

Greene's lectures will be open to the public, and admission is free.

The series is being sponsored by the Department of Law, the William and Mary Law School, and the Virginia Law Review Association.

James E. Greene, a graduate of the Yale law school, is a member of the American Bar Association and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has served as a judge on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and as a member of the Virginia Bar Association.
