The Special Rights Fallacy: How Rights Enactments for Vulnerable Groups Can Actually Make Them Worse Off (Program)

James G. Dwyer
William & Mary Law School, jgdwyer@wm.edu

Copyright © 2015 by the authors. This article is brought to you by the William & Mary Law School Scholarship Repository.
https://scholarship.law.wm.edu/tucker
The St. George Tucker Lecture Series was established in 1996 to recognize annually the scholarly achievements of a senior member of the William & Mary Law School faculty.

WILLIAM & MARY LAW SCHOOL

THE 2014-15
ST. GEORGE TUCKER LECTURE

FEBRUARY 13TH, 2015
12:50 P.M.
NATIONAL CENTER FOR STATE COURTS
Professor James G. Dwyer joined the William & Mary Law faculty in 2000 after teaching law at the Chicago-Kent College of Law and the University of Wyoming College of Law.

Prior to teaching, he practiced law with Sutherland, Asbill, and Brennan; and Coudert Brothers; both in Washington, D.C., and worked in New York State Family Court as a Law Guardian and Assigned Counsel.

Professor Dwyer teaches family law, youth law, and law and social justice. He was selected for the Class of 2010 Professorship, and he has twice been the recipient of the Plumeri Award.

"The Special Rights Fallacy: How Rights Enactments for Vulnerable Groups Can Actually Make Them Worse Off"

James G. Dwyer
Arthur B. Hanson
Professor of Law
Professor James G. Dwyer joined the William & Mary Law faculty in 2000 after teaching law at the Chicago-Kent College of Law and the University of Wyoming College of Law.

Prior to teaching, he practiced law with Sutherland, Asbill, and Brennan; and Coudert Brothers; both in Washington, D.C., and worked in New York State Family Court as a Law Guardian and Assigned Counsel.

Professor Dwyer teaches family law, youth law, and law and social justice. He was selected for the Class of 2010 Professorship, and he has twice been the recipient of the Plumeri Award.

The 2014-15 Tucker Lecture

JAMES G. DWYER
ARThUR B. HANSON
PROfESSOR OF LAW
The St. George Tucker Lecture Series was established in 1996 to recognize annually the scholarly achievements of a senior member of the William & Mary Law School faculty.

February 13th, 2015
12:50 P.M.
National Center for State Courts