THE INSTITUTE OF BILL OF RIGHTS LAW

The Institute of Bill of Rights Law is a privately funded organization primarily oriented to education and research on constitutional liberties. Its foundation in 1982 at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law recognized the prominent role of Williamsburg and the College of William and Mary in the legal education of the early leaders of the United States.

William and Mary, chartered in 1693, is the second oldest institution of higher learning in the United States. It was named after the English monarchs to whom the Parliament presented the English Bill of Rights in 1689. The College’s School of Law was named for two of Virginia’s most prominent legal figures: John Marshall and George Wythe. Marshall was the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court most responsible for forging the authority of the constitution and the nation. Wythe, under whose tutelage Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, James Monroe and Henry Clay studied law, held the first academic chair of law in America at William and Mary from 1779-1790.

The Institute derives its initial funding from the Lee Memorial Trust Fund, created in a bequest from Laura Lee of Washington, D.C. in memory of her parents, Alfred Wilson Lee and Mary L. W. Lee. Mr. Lee was founder and president of Lee Enterprises, Inc., a syndicate of newspapers and electronic media based in Davenport, Iowa.

The Institute’s central focus is scholarship and education on freedom of speech and of the press, with interests also in legal history, legal writing, and professional responsibility. The Institute serves both the legal and journalism professions in manners consistent with its ties to a professional school and an institution of higher education. The Institute is an academic foundation; it undertakes no lobbying and adopts no partisan political stance. Its mission is quality research and public education.
