W&M Starts Ball Rolling on Law Building

William & Mary officials and the state legislature are ready to begin construction plans for the law school in the new building.

The building will be part of the William & Mary complex, and the construction plans were approved by the state legislature.

The building will be located on the William & Mary campus and will be used for law school classes and other university activities.

The building will be designed by a firm of architects and will be constructed by a local contractor.

Construction is expected to begin in the fall of 1977 and to be completed by late 1978.

The building will be a two-story structure with classrooms, offices, and a law library.

The law school will be housed in the building, and the building will serve as a center for legal education and research.

The building will be a major step forward in the development of the law school and will provide a modern facility for the students and faculty.

The building will be a major source of pride for the university and the community, and it will be a symbol of the university's commitment to excellence in education.

The building will be a valuable asset to the community, and it will be a benefit to the students and faculty.
