ON THE COVER: George Wythe, at right, was William & Mary’s and the nation’s, first professor of law. John Marshall, at left, was among Wythe’s first students at the College. Marshall went on to serve as the nation’s fourth chief justice and is generally considered the greatest jurist to fill that role.
Dear Graduates, Parents, and Friends:

We are delighted to report that the year ended June 30, 2015, was a truly outstanding one for the nation’s oldest law school. Once again, we set new records in private giving. We celebrate in these pages the alumni and friends whose support and friendship have enabled the Law School to thrive.

With your generous financial support, we continue to enroll extraordinary students with a commitment to use their legal talents for the greater good. And we continue to attract and retain faculty who excel both as teachers and as scholars.

This year, we are expanding the Law School by constructing the new James A. and Robin L. Hixon Center for Experiential Learning and Leadership. This two-story, 12,000-square-foot building will house all of the Law School’s legal clinics, Legal Practice Program, and leadership activities. The Hixon Center will open during the fall of 2016.

In October, the College of William & Mary announced a university-wide, $1 billion dollar campaign. As part of this historic effort, we have set a Law School goal of $75 million in gifts and commitments by December 31, 2020.

News of the Largest Gift in Our History

The campaign announcement included news that two anonymous donors have generously contributed $22 million to the Law School, the largest gift in the Law School’s history. This gift will support student scholarships, a faculty teaching prize, and an annual leadership conference. William & Mary law students will benefit from this extraordinary gift for generations to come!

Thank you for the many ways that you support this generation of William & Mary law students. Our best days lie ahead of us!

Sincerely,

At graduation in May, Dean Douglas announced that the Class of 2015 broke the all-time Law School record for participation in a class gift, with a total of 92 percent of the graduating class making gifts or pledges. The previous record was 90 percent, held by the Class of 2014.

“I think I can say with some confidence that that is probably one of the highest, if not the highest, percentages of participation of any law school in the United States,” Douglas said. “I think it speaks volumes about the devotion of this class to their law school.”

Knowing that fundraising also involves fun, Co-Chairs Brian Focarino, Peter Vogel, and Claire Wheeler came up with something special to energize their class and maximize participation. Dean Douglas sacrificed his iconic two-decade-old mustache when the graduating Class of 2014 exceeded the prior record. This year, the dean offered to risk sitting in a dunk tank when the 3L class did the same.

Thanks to some well-placed fastballs from 3Ls, their last day of classes ended with one soaking-wet dean, an inspiring class gift effort, and a triumphant class of graduating lawyers who truly care about their school.

Reunion Giving

CLASS OF 1970: The 2nd annual Red Hot Reveley Award for Outstanding Class Participation in a Reunion Gift was presented to members of the Class of 1970 at Alumni Weekend’s Reunion Dinner. The award, a portrait of William & Mary President Taylor Reveley painted to resemble “The King of Rock’n Roll,” goes to the reunion class that achieves the highest participation as of Alumni Weekend. The theme harkens back to a “shrine” to Elvis Presley that occupied a place of honor in the student lounge in the 1980s and 1990s.

2014–2015 Annual Report
This year, the Law School is addressing several important needs through the creation of the James A. and Robin L. Hixon Center for Experiential Learning and Leadership. The project provides a new space to help students become practice ready as they concentrate on objective and persuasive writing and other practical skills necessary for successful careers in law. Our expanding clinics, too, will provide more experiential opportunities for our 2Ls and 3Ls to represent real clients in actual cases.

About the Hixon Center

- The two-story, 12,000-square-foot building is projected to cost approximately $7 million and will be funded principally through private support.
- James A. Hixon ’79, M.L.T. ’80, Executive Vice President of Law & Corporate Relations at Norfolk Southern Corporation, gave a gift to support construction. Hixon and his late wife, Robin ’79, met as students at the Law School.
- The Center will stand on the north side of the current Law School campus and is scheduled to open in Fall 2016.

"The Hixon Center is vital to our continued success in training citizen lawyers: men and women who are not only skilled advocates, but also are caring citizens and leaders in law and in our communities."
— PRESIDENT TAYLOR REVELEY

"The Center for Experiential Learning and Leadership will go beyond theory and will provide students with a resource to develop the practical skills necessary to becoming successful attorneys. I have high hopes for the center and its impact on the students who will use it."
— JAMES A. HIXON ’79, M.L.T. ’80

W&M’s clinical program — featuring 8 clinics with more than 150 positions for 2L and 3L students — addresses the unmet legal needs of the community while strengthening students’ skills and sense of responsibility with direct client interaction.

- The new center will house the highly regarded Legal Practice Program and the school’s leadership activities for the education of citizen lawyers.
- An additional courtroom will allow students to prepare for trial work in a real-world setting.
- VMDO Architects, headquartered in Charlottesville, Va., is the building’s designer, and is committed to a minimum goal of LEED silver for all its projects. Gilbane, Inc., of Providence, R.I., is managing construction.

"The construction of the Hixon Center for Experiential Learning and Leadership is an extraordinarily powerful step for us at this particular moment in our history. In my judgment, the Law School is in the strongest position it has ever been, and this gift will allow us to continue our forward momentum."
— DEAN DAVISON M. DOUGLAS
“Our clinical programs are currently located significantly away from the Law School campus. We are grateful to have this temporary space to house our programs, and are getting tremendous work done, but we are eager for the Hixon Center to open so we can return to campus in a state-of-the-art building that will enable us to be an integral part of the life of the school, and allow us to more effectively serve those desperately needing legal services.”

— PATRICIA ROBERTS ’92, CLINICAL PROFESSOR OF LAW, DIRECTOR, CLINICAL PROGRAMS AND DIRECTOR, PULLER VETERANS BENEFITS CLINIC

The Competitive Spirit at William & Mary Law

PRIVATE SUPPORT AND COMPETITION TEAMS
Private support allows William & Mary Law teams to:

- Travel to unique and challenging tournaments across the country
- Host tournaments at the Law School (such as the annual William B. Spong, Jr., Invitational Moot Court Tournament)
- Hire exceptional practitioners to coach teams

Unrestricted annual support and endowments are vital for our law teams. The Patten Trial Team Endowment, for instance, was established by former William & Mary rector Donald N. Patten, and provides annual income to better support trial team coaching and travel expenses.

Competition teams represent an important part of our students’ education. The tradition of engaging in moot court arguments began in 1780, when George Wythe reintroduced the late Medieval concept of the moot court to teach his students oral advocacy skills.

Membership on William & Mary Law School’s four competition teams is a highly sought after honor and accomplishment. Top competition teams bring recognition to the Law School, sharpen students’ skills, and make our graduates more valuable and productive young lawyers.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Team
- Focuses on client counseling and methods of dispute resolution such as negotiation, mediation, and arbitration
- Competes in 11 tournaments, including the ABA Law Student Division Negotiation Competition, the ABA LASD Client Counseling Competition, and the ABA Section of Dispute Resolution Advocacy in Mediation Competition

The Moot Court Program
- Promotes student development and refinement of oral advocacy and brief-writing skills
- Sends members to 19 inter-collegiate moot court tournaments around the nation
- Hosts the annual William B. Spong, Jr., Invitational Moot Court Tournament

The National Trial Team
- Provides extensive trial advocacy training, from evidentiary objections and fundamental trial skills to sophisticated trial strategy and persuasion
- Boasts a formidable record, competing in 17 of the nation’s most prestigious national competitions

The Transactional Law Team
- Helps students explore and improve transactional law ability, skills, and interest through preparation for and participation in transactional law competitions
- Competes in three tournaments throughout the United States
SAMPLING OF RECENT COMPETITION TEAM RESULTS

- Alternative Dispute Resolution Team
  - Winner, ABA Regional Mediation Competition; Second Place, Southwestern Entertainment Law Negotiation in Los Angeles; Excellence in Negotiation and Advocate’s Choice awards, St. John’s Securities Dispute Resolution Triathlon, 2014–2015

Three Scholarships, Many Reasons for Giving

Brian C. Goebel ’93, J.D. ’96

Burandt Family Law Scholarship

Brian C. Goebel ’93, J.D. ’96 remembers what led him to choose William & Mary for law school after he completed his undergraduate degree in government and philosophy at the College. One reason was romantic: his then girlfriend, now wife, Rebecca, was also a student at the College, but in the class after his, and would be in Williamsburg for at least part of his time in law school. (They later married in the Wren Chapel.) Another factor was economic: the Law School gave him a partial scholarship.

Economics came into play again when it was time for him to travel to clerkship interviews. Goebel’s maternal grandparents gave him travel money, and his interviews during his 2L year yielded an offer. But Goebel didn’t feel that the spot was right for him, so he turned it down. Unwavering in their support, his grandparents gave him money for another round of interviews his 3L year, and he ultimately landed a clerkship on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit that was the perfect fit. “That’s when you know your grandparents really love you,” he says. “They were really kind to me and really supportive of me when I was in law school.”

After his grandparents passed away, Goebel, his mother (Janet Burandt Goebel), and sister established the Burandt Scholarship in their memory. When his mother passed away last year, Goebel asked that it be renamed the Burandt Family Law Scholarship to reflect her role in creating and supporting it.

While he describes himself as “a bit of a late bloomer” in college, Goebel clearly hit his stride in law school, serving as an Articles Editor on the Law Review and graduating Order of the Coif. He has practiced law in Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles, served as a senior advisor in U.S. Customs and Border Protection following 9/11, and later struck out on his own as an entrepreneur. He is currently president and CEO of Sentinel Holdings and the Chairman of two subsidiary firms that provide consulting services in the homeland security, border security, and law enforcement fields. He recently launched a blog, 2040matters.com, where he encourages greater and more informed civic engagement as a solution to current and emerging public policy challenges.

Goebel recalls that he and his mother originally envisioned the scholarship not only as a way to honor his grandparents, but also as a way to recognize the role William & Mary played in his success. He also hopes the scholarship will help lift some of the burden of educational loans from its recipients so that students will have the option of pursuing public service or other career paths that are in line with their aspirations.

“[I was really fortunate to have scholarship assistance],” Goebel says. “[It made a real difference for me. The less debt that you have when you graduate from law school, the more career options you have. It is just that simple.”

Paul ’63 and Joel ’66 Shapiro Family Scholarship

Rand E. Shapiro ’72

Paul ’63 and Joel ’66 Shapiro Family Scholarship

Rand E. Shapiro ’72 recalls the meeting at William & Mary almost 50 years ago at which his family read a list of scholarships for law students as they considered creating a scholarship in his brother Paul’s memory. “I looked at the list,” he recalls, “and there were just a handful.” Fast forward almost five decades, and there are now more than 95 endowed scholarships at the Law School. The Shapiro Family Scholarship has helped more than 200 law students achieve their law degrees.

The Shapiro brothers — Paul ’63, Joel ’66, and Rand ’72 — were Norfolk natives who came to William & Mary for law school. Price Shapiro, Joel’s son, also graduated from the school in 1992.

Rand recalls Paul discussing the school’s advantages with their father. “The Law School at that time was a very small school. Classes were small, teachers were really involved with the students, and students had the opportunity to work in the area at law practices,” he says. Their father paid their tuition, but all three were expected to earn money to pay for other expenses.

Paul, the oldest, was the first to graduate. He then earned his master’s in tax law at New York University, married, and was practicing at a firm in Detroit when he died in a car accident on the way to a football game. He was 27.

Two families, Rand says, made the creation of the scholarship in Paul’s memory possible and have ensured its longevity — his own family and the Prentises, Paul’s wife’s family. The scholarship was created to benefit students at the Law School because, he recalls, “we felt like Paul had enjoyed his time at William & Mary more than at any of the other schools he attended.” While the tuition was low, the families knew it was still more than some students could afford, “so the concept was to help a student, or a few students, get in the door and help them with their education.” Some 200 or more scholarship awards later, Rand is delighted. “We had no idea that we would make it this long and achieve this much,” he says.

After their graduations from law school, Rand and Joel stayed in Hampton Roads. Joel founded Shapiro & Zaleski in Norfolk, with his classmate, Allan D. Zaleski ’66, and later founded First American Title of Tidewater, Inc., which had offices throughout Virginia. The scholarship also has borne his name since his death in 2005. Rand worked for a time as a deputy prosecutor in Norfolk after his graduation and later founded the firm of Scanelli & Shapiro with his classmate, John Scanelli ’72.

Rand refers to the Law School as “his secondary family” and says that he, his brother, and nephew attributed a great deal of their success to their William & Mary education. Now enjoying retirement in Florida, he has kept most of the letters he has received over the years from scholarship recipients. He has been impressed by the hard work that got each of them to law school and is happy that the scholarship helped make their legal educations possible. One student underlined a sentence in her letter, “Thank you for giving me peace of mind,” he recalls. “It’s nice to know that the scholarship has meant so much to so many students,” he says.

Virginia Mister Scholarship

Bring together a dozen or more of the Law School’s most accomplished alumnae to discuss leadership and what happens? Among other things, they think of ways to help the next generation of law students. That is what happened, according to Anna P. Engh ’89, a partner at Covington & Burling in Washington, D.C., at the conclusion of the first “Lawyers as Leaders” conference at the Law School in 2012, which brought together alumnae who were current or former partners at the nation’s largest law firms.

“The consensus was to establish a scholarship for an outstanding woman law student applicant with financial need,” says Engh. Professor Jayne Barnard, who organized the first three “Lawyers as Leaders” conferences, with a fourth planned for January 2016, had the great idea, Engh says, of naming the scholarship after Virginia Mister, the first woman graduate of the Law School.

Mister earned undergraduate and law degrees at William & Mary. The only female law student in the Class of 1937, Mister was among the first women in Virginia to pass the Law Bar. Like most female attorneys at that time, she found many firms resistant to hiring women to practice law. She began her legal career as a secretary at a Norfolk law firm (and led a broad array of civic efforts in the city during World War II). Mister moved to New York City after the war, beginning a 25-year career at the newly established United Nations, where she served as head of the Legal, Political and Security Council Affairs Library.

Engh spearheaded the effort to create the scholarship endowment because she knew the scholarship would make a difference to students going forward. She says she was also pleased with the symbolism “associated with alumnae sponsoring the scholarship for the next generations of women lawyers.” She says that thanks to the generosity of a number of people, the endowment has reached a level that will allow the first scholarship to be extended to a student for fall 2016.

“In my view, scholarships are vital to maintaining and further enhancing the high quality of students at the Law School,” she says. With fierce competition among law schools for the best students, “it is even more important that William & Mary attract excellent students through attractive scholarship offerings.”

Celebrating Family and Honoring a Legacy

Sherwin’s parents, Betsy ’70 and the late Alvin P. Anderson ’70, J.D. ’72, met during their freshman year at William & Mary. Married in 1969, the couple settled in Williamsburg where they raised their two daughters, Mary Beth and Sara.

“I came from Richmond to go to college and I never left,” says Betsy, who earned a degree in elementary education.

But perhaps the most impassioned Tribe member was Alvin.

“Anyone who knew him knew that William & Mary was like another child to him,” says Sherwin of her father who passed away in 2008. “He talked about the College all the time. He set an amazing example of being committed with both money and time.”

Alvin served as a member of the Board of Visitors (2005-07), as a president of the William & Mary Alumni Association (1996-1997), and as a trustee of the Law School Foundation (1999-08). In 1998, he received the Alumni Medallion, the highest honor bestowed by the William & Mary Alumni Association, for his unwavering service and loyalty.

After Alvin passed away, Betsy continued her family’s commitment to the College through her service as president of the William & Mary Alumni Association (2008–2009) and as a trustee of the Law School Foundation (2011–present).

“It’s been wonderful to get to know the leadership of the Law School and to see that the College is in good hands,” says Betsy, who also volunteers for several other Williamsburg-area boards and organizations. “There are a lot of accomplished people working on behalf of the school and I enjoy being part of the William & Mary family.”

As part of his 36-year law career, Alvin was a managing partner at Kaufman & Canoles. He also served the community in a multitude of roles. He was, for example, a director of the Riverside Healthcare Association, a trustee and chair of the Hampton Roads Academy board, and a member of multiple TowneBank boards, including Hampton Roads, Peninsula, and Williamsburg. Additionally, he was the commissioner in chancery and the commissioner of accounts for the circuit courts of the City of Williamsburg and James City County.

In tribute to Alvin’s service and commitment, TowneBank established a scholarship in his name to be awarded to a William & Mary Law School student and undergraduate business major each year. Betsy is involved in selecting the scholarship recipients.

“It is important to me to be part of the decision,” says Betsy. “It is not just an academic award, we want to choose someone who truly emulates Alvin’s personality and how he enjoyed life.” For Betsy, the best part is getting to know the scholarship recipients and keeping in touch with them over the years.

“It’s great to sit around the table, talk and connect with the students who are benefiting from the support. It makes it real,” she says. “It’s exciting to me to see the development of these young people and be part of it.”

The Anderson family also honored Alvin’s legacy by adding to memorial gifts and establishing the Alvin P. Anderson Scholarship. Many years ago, as a trustee for the family foundation put in place by her late grandfather, Betsy also established the Derrick Family Foundation Scholarship, which has grown to support two law students.

“Getting involved and getting to know all the people at the Law School is truly a wonderful feeling,” says Betsy. “I encourage others to get involved because there really is no downside. You get so much more out of the opportunity than you give.”

For the Anderson family, William & Mary is more than an education, it’s a family tradition.

“From childhood gymnastics classes to annual football games, the College has always been a part of my life,” says Mary Beth Sherwin J.D. ’00, who practices in the Norfolk office of Kaufman & Canoles. “William & Mary was important to my parents. We’ve had so many great years and made so many good memories there.”

Judge Carla Archie J.D. ’95

Judge Carla Archie’s impressive career is guided by a strong sense of family and community. “My parents encouraged me to find and explore my natural gifts rather than swim against the tide. I have lived by what I believe — that learning should be a lifelong process.”

A strong sense of community brought Archie to William & Mary and it’s what keeps her engaged with the school today.

Originally from Danville, Virginia, Archie graduated from Hampton University in 1992 with a degree in accounting. She decided to continue straight into law school.

“Two phone calls helped seal my law school decision,” says Archie, who applied to several schools. “The calls were from current William & Mary law students who had also graduated from Hampton University. They talked about their experience, the atmosphere, the faculty, and more. I felt immediately at ease. We shared a similar background, and they made me feel excited and comfortable about the transition to law school.”

A summer internship during law school at the Charlotte (N.C.) District Attorney’s office introduced Archie to the courtroom and piqued her interest in trial law.

“Since middle school, I had participated in debate club, public speaking, and a number of other activities that helped me feel comfortable on my feet,” says Archie, who also served as president of William & Mary’s Black Law Students Association. “The internship allowed me to try real cases and I loved it.”

After graduation, she returned to Charlotte and spent seven years as an assistant district attorney.

“Being a prosecutor was very valuable work, but I was concerned about my financial future,” she recalls. “I decided to move in-house, and I accepted a position as assistant general counsel for Wachovia Corporation.”

After several years at Wachovia, she decided to seek a judicial position. She interviewed to be a district court judge but was offered a position as the first general counsel for the North Carolina Education Lottery instead.

“I was charged with helping to get the state’s first lottery off the ground,” says Archie. “It was like running a start-up business in Silicon Valley. We worked 12 hours a day, seven days a week, for three months. We had to do everything from finding a facility to hiring employees to printing the lottery tickets.”

Always passionate about the importance of education, she felt gratified that lottery proceeds were designated to help students and schools.

“Education has always been important in my life and I felt deeply satisfied with what we were doing,” says Archie. “It was one of the most rewarding experiences in my career.”

In 2008, she decided to return to the corporate world and accepted a position as senior litigation counsel for Wells Fargo & Company. Six years later, a chance conversation with a colleague changed her career course yet again.

“I ran into a friend in a restaurant who told me about an upcoming judicial vacancy,” says Archie, who had just become president of the Mecklenburg County Bar. “That wasn’t where my head was at the moment, but I realized that there was no perfect time to make a change.”

In November 2014, she was elected a superior court judge for the 26th Judicial District of the Superior Court Division in North Carolina. Her term commenced on January 1 of this year.

“It’s been wonderful and not like anything I’ve done before,” she says. “I am accustomed to the role of advocate, taking one side. Now I need to remain neutral. It is much more difficult than I anticipated. It feels like I’m back in law school. I’m confronted with issues I haven’t touched as a practitioner. I often find myself needing to do research, to dig deeper and explore an issue.”

Archie has made it a point to remain connected with William & Mary. She has been a generous contributor to the Oliver W. Hill Scholarship Endowment and also has come back to participate in alumni panels to speak with students and recent graduates about her life and career path.

“What impressed me initially about William & Mary was the sense of community,” says Archie. “I still regard the College very fondly and it’s important for me to give back.”
After Brown graduated, he immediately continued his studies at the Law School, where he also received a scholarship and was a member of the William & Mary Law Review and Phi Alpha Delta.

“I knew I wanted to be a lawyer and I was already in the academic routine,” says Brown. “I applied to another law school but I chose William & Mary Law and never regretted it.”

After graduation, he worked for Shanley & Fisher, a large insurance defense firm in New Jersey, where he handled medical malpractice and product liability insurance defense litigation. In 1977, Brown began his nearly 33-year career with the General Motors Legal Staff in Detroit.

“Being a corporate lawyer fit me quite nicely,” he says. “But if you had told me when I started at W&M Law that was what I would end up doing, I never would have believed it.”

During his GM career, he managed product litigation cases, certain regulatory matters, and also negotiated and drafted product responsibility agreements with GM’s international business partners. He traveled worldwide and spoke quite often in Asia and Europe, familiarizing foreign companies doing business with GM about U.S. tort law and litigation processes.

“I started my volunteer work before I retired because I wanted to stay busy,” says Brown. “William & Mary has meant so much to me that it was an obvious choice when I wanted to give back.”

Brown serves as secretary/treasurer of the Law School Foundation, chairs the Development Committee, and is a member of the Campaign Steering Committee. He has been active in the Law School’s Alumni Ambassadors Program, the Co-Counsel Mentoring Program, and also has co-chaired several of his Law School and undergraduate reunion gift committees. Brown served seven years on William & Mary’s Annual Giving Board of Directors, chaired the Board for two years, and is a Class Ambassador for his undergraduate class.

“I love being part of the William & Mary community and working as a liaison for William & Mary in Michigan,” says Brown, who has served as the College’s Alumni Admissions Network representative for southeastern Michigan. “Today’s students are exceptionally smart and well-qualified.”

Brown believes that having William & Mary on his résumé twice, for undergraduate and law degrees, has been enormously valuable in his career.

“The scholarship is available to any student with financial need who maintains good academic standing,” says Brown. “I wanted to keep the requirements as flexible as possible.”

The scholarship was fully funded in 2014. “I recently had the pleasure of meeting Ethan Smith (‘18), the first recipient of the scholarship,” he says. “Attending William & Mary on a scholarship changed my life and I look forward to doing the same for others.”

A loyal and proud alumnus, Doug Brown spends significant time in retirement actively involved with the William & Mary community. Like many alumni, Brown feels grateful and happy to give his time and resources to the alma mater that gave him so much.

A scroll through Brown’s LinkedIn profile reveals a successful career and an impressive list of volunteer appointments, most of which are with William & Mary.

“I owe a lot to William & Mary and I want to give back,” says Brown. “Having the College on my résumé made a huge difference in my career.”

Originally from Marion, Indiana, Brown received his bachelor’s degree in sociology from William & Mary in 1971.

“I grew up in the Midwest and I wanted to broaden my horizons,” he says. “William & Mary was the best choice. I liked the campus, the academic programs, and, of course, the basketball scholarship the College offered me.”
Grateful for Success, Committed to Making a Difference in Students’ Lives

Nicholas J. St. George ’60 J.D. ’65

“I’m glad my dreams didn’t come true because I couldn’t have dreamed what I’ve been able to do. William & Mary sparked my thirst for knowledge and changed me in so many beneficial ways. It was very valuable to me in my life and my career.”

For Nick St. George, life’s successes came after leaps of faith.

“There were several times in my life where I had the opportunity to step into the unknown and each time it paid off,” says St. George.

As a teenager, he set his sights on being the first in his family to attend college.

“I focused on academics and athletics and I was successful at both,” says St. George, who was offered scholarships at several schools, including William & Mary. “I was overcome by the beauty of the city and the friendliness of the people. Going to William & Mary changed my life. It was a truly wonderful experience.”

In 1960, he graduated with an economics degree. He worked for General Electric for eight months, and then joined the Army as an Airborne officer to fulfill a ROTC obligation.

“After two years in the service, I decided to get more education,” he says. “When I took the law school admission test and did well, I thought, ‘God must want me to be a lawyer.’ Attending William & Mary again as a law student was an opportunity of a lifetime.”

St. George practiced law in Norfolk for a year when he received a call from a good college friend, Raymond A. “Chip” Mason. Mason had founded a brokerage firm, Mason & Co., several years earlier in Newport News. He asked St. George to start an investment banking division at the firm.

“It was the second time in my life where I took a leap of faith into the unknown, the first was attending William & Mary,” says St. George. “Both times it paid off. Soon after starting at Mason & Co., I knew I wouldn’t go back to law. Investment banking and Wall Street opened vistas to me I never knew existed.”

In 1970, Legg & Co. acquired Mason & Co. to form Legg Mason & Co., Inc. St. George was in charge of Legg Mason’s investment banking division. Nine years later, another opportunity knocked on St. George’s door when he was offered the CEO position at Oakwood Homes, a national manufactured housing and modular home business.

“As an investment banker, I often gave advice to CEOs, but I had never been a CEO myself so I thought it could be a useful experience,” he says. “I planned to go back to investment banking after a couple years, but I enjoyed it so much, I stayed for 20 years.”

In 1999, he retired from Oakwood Homes, which had grown into a billion dollar company on the NYSE under his leadership. After retirement, he remained on several public company boards, including Legg Mason.

“The education I got in undergrad and law school and my experience in the Army learning leadership principles were extremely valuable in my success in life,” says St. George. “I’ve always recognized that my success did not just come only from me. Many people and institutions helped me along the way.”

St. George’s loyalty and generosity to William & Mary has been recognized by membership in the James Blair Society and Wren Society, and the Wolf Law Library’s Rare Book Room bears his name in recognition of his support. Among recent gifts, he has provided vital funds for a Law School scholarship endowment. He is a member of the Mason School of Business Foundation board, and is an emeritus trustee of the William & Mary Foundation and the Law School Foundation.

In 2010, the William & Mary Alumni Association honored him with the Alumni Medallion, the highest award it can bestow on a graduate in recognition of his or her professional accomplishments, dedication to the community and commitment to alma mater.

“In some way, I want to pay back the philanthropy that I received when I went to school,” says St. George. “William & Mary was a big part of my success and I want to help others by making a difference in their lives so that they, in turn, can make a difference in the lives of others.”

Gifts at Work

R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., Reading Room

Students needing a quiet place to work and study have exactly that in the R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., Reading Room. Located on the first floor of the Wolf Law Library, the spacious area recognizes the service and generosity of distinguished alumnus R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., ’48, B.C.L. ’50, LL.D. ’84, who passed away in 2012.

Throughout his life and impressive career, Chappell made service and the College a priority. In the late 1940s, he launched the William & Mary Review of Virginia Law, now known as the William & Mary Law Review. He was a member of the Board of Visitors, served as vice rector and rector, and as president of the William & Mary Law School Association, which he created, and as president of the Society of the Alumni.

Chappell’s generosity also led him to establish the Ann C. and R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., Fellows Program. The Law School has provided more than 140 students with these scholarships.

Gifts at Work
John E. Donaldson Classroom

As an undergraduate and law student, Randy S. Hawthorne ’67, J.D. ’70, M.L.T. ’71 took multiple courses under John E. Donaldson J.D. ’63, William & Mary’s Ball Professor of Law Emeritus, and even worked alongside him at a local Williamsburg accounting firm.

Wanting to honor his teacher, friend, and mentor, Hawthorne and his wife, Shelby M. Hawthorne ’67, M.A.Ed. ’75, decided to make a gift that also improves the educational experience at the Law School.

The result is the John E. Donaldson Classroom. Dedicated in Fall 2014, the fully refurbished, high-tech classroom (Room 127) offers the latest in high definition audio-visual technology and video conferencing equipment.

Donaldson joined the faculty in 1966 and taught tax law and trusts and estates for 35 years. His accolades include the Thomas A. Graves Teaching Award, the Walter L. Williams, Jr., Memorial Teaching Award, the Law School Association’s Citizen-Lawyer Award, and the Thomas Jefferson Award.

In addition to their leadership gift for the Donaldson Classroom, the Hawthornes have made generous gifts in support of scholarships for law students.

Mary Siegrist Hinz Leadership Fellowship

Colleen R. Smith ’15, a recipient of a Mary Siegrist Hinz Leadership Fellowship, exemplifies the qualities of the program’s namesake: an exceptional student, possessed of a concern for others, and an outstanding athlete. Family and friends of Mary Siegrist Hinz (1959-1984) established the fellowship in her memory following her death after her 2L year.

Smith is currently clerking for a federal district judge for the Eastern District of Virginia, and will clerk in 2016-17 for a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. She will then join the Washington, D.C., office of Covington & Burling. A summa cum laude graduate of the College of Idaho, she was an All-American in soccer and an All-Conference in cross country and track. In 2010, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics named her female Scholar-Athlete of the Year. At Marshall-Wythe, she was valedictorian of her class. The faculty selected her for the I’Anson Award, an honor given at graduation to recognize great professional promise as demonstrated through scholarship, character, and leadership.

“The Mary Siegrist Hinz Fellowship was a huge factor in my decision to attend William & Mary,” says Smith. “I was able to focus on finding a career path I am passionate about, without feeling the pressure to take the first job I was offered that would help pay off student loans. My scholarship gave me a freedom I never expected and for that I am deeply grateful.”

The Kelly Professorship of Teaching Excellence

Since 2007, the Kelly Professorship of Teaching Excellence has helped nurture the extraordinary teaching for which the Law School is known. The professorship was made possible by a gift from the late Herbert V. Kelly, Sr. ’41, B.C.L. ’43, LL.D. ’93, who was senior partner at Jones, Blechman,沃尔t & Kelly in Newport News, Va.

Adam Gershowitz, the current Kelly Professor and Associate Dean for Research and Faculty Development, is an expert in criminal procedure and criminal justice, and has written many scholarly articles. He has won seven teaching awards, including the Walter L. Williams, Jr., Memorial Teaching Award.

The Kelly Professorship has enabled Gershowitz to develop programs for the faculty at large to improve teaching. He has focused on how to optimize laptop use in the classroom, improve use of the Socratic Method, and provide effective exam drafting and grading.

Revive My Vote Project

Launched in April 2014, the Law School’s Revive My Vote project helps Virginians with prior felony convictions who are eligible for voting rights restoration to navigate the process of regaining their right to vote. A recent grant of $230,000 from the Knight Foundation’s Knight News Challenge greatly supports the project’s mission.

The grant allows Revive My Vote to directly assist the Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth with reducing applicant wait times, as well as to develop an online outreach platform to inspire, motivate, and inform prospective applicants. Leveraging connections with the Williamsburg Bar Association and other organizations, Revive My Vote students and volunteer attorneys are dedicated to advancing the project’s mission to educate the public about rights restoration and help individual applicants through the process.

Program Co-Founder Professor Rebecca Green, who also is co-director of the Law School’s Election Law Program, says the Knight News Challenge grant enables the organization to affect meaningful change in the lead-up to the 2016 election.

Cabell Research Professorships

To retain current faculty and recruit the best new professors, William & Mary must provide opportunities and funding for faculty research. Among those answering the call is the Cabell Foundation of Richmond, Va., which created two endowments for research professorships at the Law School. The William H. Cabell Research Professors for 2015–16 are Jeffrey Bellin and Neal Devins.

Considered one of the foremost scholars of electronic evidence and an expert in criminal law, evidence, and law and technology, Bellin received the Walter L. Williams, Jr., Memorial Teaching Award in 2014 and the Plumeri Award for Faculty Excellence in 2015.

At William & Mary since 1987, Devins holds the Sandra Day O’Connor Professorship and is director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law. His extensive resume includes the books The Democratic Constitution, Political Dynamics of Constitutional Law, and Shaping Constitutional Values, and numerous articles in top law reviews. He is also a two-time recipient of the Plumeri Award for Faculty Excellence.
The FirmMate Challenge

The FirmMate Challenge encourages William & Mary Law graduates, who work at the same firms or agencies, to support Marshall-Wythe by striving to reach 100 percent alumni participation at their organizations.

We thank those firms that participated in this program in 2015, and also wish to express our gratitude to the FirmMate Coordinators at each organization who contributed their time and financial resources to help with this important program.

100% Participation Firms
